Welcome to the National Academy of Creative Arts

A New Home for Creative Education

The National Academy of Creative Arts (NACA) is a new institutional framework for creative education bringing together specialist schools, experienced educators, and industry professionals within a single academy dedicated to arts and design.

Built on more than two decades of specialist creative education, NACA unifies disciplines including interior design, photography, fashion design, garden design, graphic design, and creative writing within a cohesive academic structure.

Our focus is clear: to deliver creative education that is practical, portfolio-led, and aligned with the realities of today's creative industries.

As the global creative economy continues to expand, more people are seeking flexible, career-focused pathways that allow them to develop professional capability while balancing study with work and life commitments.

NACA was created in response to this shift.

By bringing together specialist schools within a single academy, we provide students with access to:

- structured creative pathways
- portfolio-led, practice-based learning
- industry-informed teaching
- a connected creative community

Whether you are exploring a new creative direction, developing professional capability, or working toward a recognised qualification, NACA provides a framework where creative ambition can evolve into professional confidence.

Here, ideas evolve into practice, portfolios take shape, and creative futures begin.

Our Schools

Specialist Schools.
One Academy.

The National Academy of Creative Arts is organised into a series of specialist schools, each focused on a distinct creative discipline.

This model combines deep subject expertise with the broader perspective of a multidisciplinary creative education.

Each discipline is delivered in partnership with an established academy, drawing on more than two decades of teaching experience, professional practice, and industry credibility.

Together, these schools form the academic foundation of NACA.

Faculty and Industry Leadership

A Faculty of Creative Practitioners

At the National Academy of Creative Arts, learning is led by a faculty of practising creative professionals, educators, and subject specialists working across the creative industries.

Our faculty combine professional practice with teaching expertise, bringing real-world insight into every programme. From interior designers and photographers to writers and graphic designers, they understand how creative work operates in studios, agencies, and independent practice.

Students benefit from tutors who can translate professional experience into practical learning – guiding them through portfolio development, project briefs, and the creative decision-making that defines professional practice.

This practice-led approach ensures that learning remains grounded in the realities of contemporary creative industries.

The Creative Arts Advisory Council

The National Academy of Creative Arts is supported by a Creative Arts Advisory Council, bringing together artists, educators, industry professionals, and employers from across the creative sector.

The Council provides strategic guidance on both academic standards and industry relevance, helping ensure that programmes remain aligned with contemporary creative practice and professional expectations.

Working alongside the Academy's academic leadership, the Council contributes to:

- curriculum development and programme review
- alignment with industry practices and emerging trends
- the maintenance of academic standards across all schools
- the continued relevance of portfolio-led learning

“This governance structure ensures that the Academy’s programmes are not only creatively inspiring but also academically robust and professionally relevant. It also supports the Academy’s wider academic standards framework, helping ensure consistency, quality assurance, and relevance across all specialist schools.”

Creative Pathways

Choosing the right creative arts course begins with clarity about what you want to achieve. Our courses are structured around two distinct pathways:

- Explore & Upskill: Creative and professional development
- Degree Pathway: Accredited Higher Education through to BA (Hons) Degree level

Which pathway is right for me?

If you're seeking a nationally recognised qualification with academic progression and the option of future postgraduate study, our Higher Education pathway provides a comprehensive and accredited route through to BA (Hons) level.

If your goal is applied professional capability without formal academic credit, our Certificate, Diploma, and Professional Diploma pathways provide a focused, practice-led route into creative industry practice across selected disciplines.

Explore & Upskill:

Turn creativity into capability

This route is designed for students who want to explore creative arts, build professional capability, or prepare for client-facing practice.

It includes three courses:

- Certificate (Creative Foundations)
- Diploma (Professional Foundations)
- Professional Diploma (Advanced Practice)

Certificate (Creative Foundations)

Certificate courses introduce the language and principles of each creative discipline.

Students explore core design concepts through structured assignments that develop visual awareness, creative thinking, and practical skills.

Certificates are ideal for:

- beginners exploring a creative interest
- hobbyists seeking structured learning
- individuals considering a future career change.

Diploma (Professional Foundations)

Diploma programmes build applied creative capability through project-led learning.

Students begin working with professional-style briefs, developing skills in research, design development, technical execution, and presentation.

Professional Diploma (Advanced Practice):

Professional Diploma programmes extend foundational knowledge into advanced professional capability.

Students learn to manage projects from concept through to final presentation while developing portfolio-ready work aligned with industry expectations.

These programmes are well suited to students preparing for professional practice or freelance careers.

CPD Standards Office Accredited

Our Diploma and Professional Diploma courses in Interior Design, Fashion Design, Graphic Design, Photography and Digital Marketing are accredited by the CPD Standards Office, confirming that the programmes meet recognised Continuing Professional Development standards.

This accreditation reinforces the professional relevance of your studies and supports structured career progression within the design industry.

Higher Education Pathway

Find Your Voice. Shape Your Future.

Students seeking recognised higher education qualifications can progress through:

- Higher National Certificate (HNC) – Level 4 (Interior Design, Photography, Graphic Design, Fashion Design)
- Higher National Diploma (HND) – Level 5 (Interior Design, Photography, Graphic Design, Fashion Design)
- BA (Hons) Top-Up Degree – Level 6 (Interior Design, Photography, Graphic Design)

These programmes combine academic study with portfolio-based design projects, allowing students to develop both critical thinking and professional design capability.

“The details are not the details.
They make the design.”
